What is a Share?

Imagine your company is a pizza, which consists of 1200 slices. If you own a slice, you own part of the company. If you own 600 slices, you own 50% of the company and so on.

Who is a Director and who Shareholder?

A Director is an individual who manages the company and a Shareholder is an individual who owns the company, often times the Directors and Shareholders are the same people.

Example One: You are one person

You will be both the Director and the Shareholder; this means that you will have the entire 1200 shares assigned to your name

Example Two: You are a two people

Both individuals will be both Directors and Shareholders. Depending on how much each individual invests in the company will indicate what percentage each one possesses.

Example: You are a three people

All three individuals will be both Directors and Shareholders. If you are all investing the same amount of funds into the company, each one will own 400 shares.
